From the Editor

After a remarkably long and very warm summer the mornings are getting darker and colder, the weather forecasts tell of forthcoming frosts, rain and storms, the nights are drawing in, and this cycle will continue until the winter solstice, the day of the year with the fewest hours of daylight, December 21st. After this date the process once again reverses as days begin to get lighter and lighter until midsummer.

However, despite the days getting darker, for us twinnings they will be brightened by the new 2025/2026 Twinning Season, which kicked off with the AGM on 18th September, and promises a host of enjoyable events to come. Our next event being the wine tasting on 16th October featuring wines from our twin town regions, organised by Majestic Wines.

Our programme for this Autumn, in addition to our regular monthly meetings, includes our popular Christmas meal get together at the Hilton Hotel. This coming year will see activities with Argentan, including outdoor activities for young people and the Bastille Day celebrations, and a French exchange for younger people. Other exciting news is that one of our youngest members, Mark, has volunteered to start an Instagram page and a social media account with photos!

Church twinning is also active with a visit to Sint-Niklaas planned for 2nd - 6th October, and a barn dance planned for February. Activities are also being planned to celebrate the 750th anniversary of the birth of St Edmund.

This Newsletter contains a report of the AGM, and of the excellent Treasure Hunt around our local villages and a preliminary list of events for the next few months, as well as a special report from our Sint-Niklaas correspondent, Siegfried Waterschoot on their recent twinning weekend.

Treasure Hunt

Wednesday 10 September 2025 (Postponed from 17 July)

Following the success of last year's treasure hunt, Stella, Howard and Peter devised a new one for this year, all based on churchyards in some of our pretty villages in the south of the county.

The Treasure Hunters, numbering around 30 in a variety of cars met in Waitrose car park, at 5pm on Wednesday 10th September and were handed a sheet of clues.

Off we set, each car planning its own route around the villages, many were stymied by extraordinary traffic jams around Sutton Courtenay and Steventon, following the sudden closure of the Drayton Road due to a gas leak. The weather conditions also presented challenges, with driving rain and strong winds, delays were also caused by accidents on the country lanes.

Harry, Alison and Dave

Fr. Matthew Topham telling us about East Hendred and the Dame

However, many interesting church graveyards were visited, including All Saints Church in Sutton Courtenay where Eric Blair aka George Orwell is buried, St Andrew's Church in Letcombe Regis where a Maori captain was buried, and St Mary's Church in East Hendred where a Dame was buried.

Like last year, the treasure hunt finished at The Wheatsheaf in East Hendred at 8pm, in time for dinner, where we enjoyed a superb meal, with extremely large portions, which was followed by the counting of the marks and the prize-giving ceremony. During the counting process we were lucky enough to be overheard by Fr. Matthew Topham, priest of the Roman Catholic St Mary's Church in East Hendred, who then gave us a most interesting talk on the church and on the history of the Dame in the graveyard, whose gravestone was the subject of one of the challenges. "Dame" being the honorific for an English Benedictine nun. First Prize went to new members Alison and Dave, who scored maximum points.

A huge thank you to the organisers for putting together such an interesting and enjoyable challenge

Evening Meeting – AGM – Thursday 18th September

Thursday 18 September 2024 - at Preston Road Community Centre

Members of the Abingdon and District Twin Towns Society (ADTTS) returned on Thursday 18th September after the summer break to Preston Road Community Centre for the first meeting of the twinning year. As usual this was the Annual General Meeting. It provided an opportunity to review the past twelve months, to elect officers and committee, and to consider plans for the coming year.

The Society's Chairman, Stella Carter, welcomed to the meeting the Mayor of Abingdon Cllr Rawda Jehanli. Norma Queralt agreed to take the minutes. The business followed the usual format and was despatched thoroughly, but efficiently. The papers for the meeting had been available on the Society's website for members to see in advance.

Stella Carter, in her Chairman's report, described events from twinning during the year. Moving on to the future, Stella outlined the draft programme for the coming year. An interesting series of monthly meetings is planned, as well as the customary Christmas Lunch, Europe Day Meal and summer Garden Party.

The Mayor took the chair for the elections. The meeting was happy to re-elect the present Chairman and Vice Chairman and committee. The Society continues to lack a Secretary. Susan Read was elected Treasurer.

In her address to the meeting Mayor Rawda Jehanli thanked the ADTTS chair and committee for their work in helping to raise the awareness of twinning amongst the people of Abingdon. In particular the Mayors' conference held earlier in the year which she felt had been a great success in promoting the town of Abingdon and of its citizens.

Maggie Greaney reported on a successful Church Twinning year and on the activities and events of the coming year.

Richard gave a brief summary about twinning activities with Argentan this year, and on a French exchange being planned, which he is helping with. There was a general discussion at the end over improving communications with youth in the town and one of our younger members Mark McMarrick has volunteered to start an Instagram page and a social media account with photographs. Another suggestion was that someone should go round local groups alerting them to twinning, and Howard felt he could undertake that.

The meeting ended at 9.20 pm and was followed by wine and cheese.

From Siegfried Waterschoot in Sint-Niklaas

Being in charge

Since the participants of Abingdon couldn't make it to Sint-Niklaas, Nick asked me, with a pleading voice, if I could write an article about the twinning event. A kind of personal reflection, as it were.

Thursday.

First, I took a look at the weather forecast. Considering the balloon festival, it looked almost perfect. The wind was behaving, the day was to be sunny, and there was neither rain nor cloud at the horizon. Except for the evening, everything was going to be perfect.

In the morning, I received an urgent telephone call: The Abingdon delegation couldn't come. I immediately contacted the host family, but they were already notified by Richard. A nice start of events. I knew I would have to explain a lot in the evening in different languages.

That evening at our meeting point, the different delegations dropped by as well as our mayor. The welcome speeches were made, the mayor received the gifts, and everybody had a good time.

Friday

I drove our minibus to our meeting point. Everybody was on time, except for the Italians. Their host gave me a call that they would drive straight to our destination: the left bank of the river Scheldt in Antwerp. Here started the walk through Antwerp, with a short stroll to the pedestrian and cycle ferry to get to the other side of the river. Our visitors were treated with a stunning view of the skyline of the centre of Antwerp.

After setting foot on the quay, we continued our journey, visiting the tourist centre in Antwerp castle. We strolled to the market place, admiring the old houses and town hall. Onwards to the next monument, the Bartholomeus church. A former Jesuit church built in a strictly Baroque style.

We continued our route, along some roadworks, to the next hidden gem: the Sint-Niklaas square, tucked away by an arched passage. A statue of Saint Nicholas sits on a pillar in the middle of it. Next stop, with great luck because normally it is only open at weekends, was the "Handelsbeurs", the stock exchange during the golden age of Antwerp. It burned down and was rebuilt as a ship exchange in neo-gothic style, neglected almost to disrepair, and recently restored to its former glory and transformed into an event hall.

From there we walked to the "Groenplaats" where the statue of Rubens has his residence. We reached it via a passage through the "Vlaaienkensgang", a medieval alley. Our guests each received a fresh and crisp banknote of 20€ for lunch at a restaurant of their choice.

Everybody fed and hydrated, we walked by the cathedral, across the market towards our next gem: the Sint-Paulus church. Outside the church, we admired a rather exceptional Calvary Mountain. Inside, the highlight was the exhibition of a painting by Van Dijck and one by Rubens on either side of the main altar. You could admire them both from close up.

From the church, it was a long walk past the university of Antwerp to the "begijnhof", the beguinage. We entered the very quiet and peaceful walled community through a gate and found a garden with fruit trees surrounded by a small cobblestoned road, in turn surrounded by tiny gated houses.

As there are no more beguines, the houses are rented to single ladies. As the sign said at the entrance: No men allowed between 6pm and 8am. During which time the gate is closed.

Feeling very thirsty, a watering hole was found in a nearby square. Internally fortified we set course for the next stop, the Sint-Jacob church. This church still is one of the starting points if you want to experience a pilgrimage to Santiago de Compostella. This is also the church where Rubens is buried, unfortunately that part of the church is now under restoration.

The journey continued through the centre of Antwerp to the last highlight of this trip, the "voetgangerstunnel", which is the pedestrian tunnel under the Scheldt. This tunnel was dug out in the thirties of the last century, and was a much-needed connection between the two banks of the river. The outer buildings are in the Art Deco style. The stairs are still the original ones made of wood. We walked the 572m to the left bank to find the cars that took us back to Sint-Niklaas.

Saturday

Our guests had a free morning. We drove to the place where the Sunday afternoon and evening events would take place to make some preparations for our "Games without Borders" and the BBQ.

At one o'clock we gathered again to take a ride to the industrialized left bank of the Scheldt. First stop: the ghost village Doel. In the nineties of the last century this village was doomed to be destroyed in favour of the expansion of the tidal docks. The village was abandoned and suffered from vandalism. Due to a lack of finance the expansion was abandoned some years ago. It will take many years to restore the village.

Next, we drove to the fortress of Liefkenshoek. In the 16th century this fortress was built for the defence of Antwerp. Over the centuries the occupiers changed several times. It ended up as a quarantine building during the first half the last century for the Red Star Line, the famous ship liner that took immigrants from Europe to the United States.

Thereafter, belonging to the military, it fell in disrepair until it was restored at the beginning of this century. Now it's a small green lung in the middle of the port industry. The permanent exhibition shows the evolution of the fortress.

Of course, there is pub/restaurant where the local beer "Napoleon" is served and -according to the waitress- with extra gunpowder if you want, just to make it a smidgeon stronger. Back to Sint-Niklaas to admire the take-off of the hot air balloons, regular ones and the special shapes.

Sunday

We met at the back of the railway station. Under the expert guidance of Marc, we meandered through the city along some street art, a couple of Art Nouveau houses and a lot of Art Deco houses. We ended our walk in the "Broeders" school, a pinnacle in Art Deco. The official entrance hall takes your breath away.

Around two pm, I headed to the venue to make the final preparations for our games and BBQ.

The games consisted of 10 silly games. All our guests received an envelope containing a badge to identify their team and a letter with a cryptic description of the different games. Each team consisted of members of the different twin towns. They had to decide which of their members would participate in a game. If they thought someone would excel in a particular game, they could use a "joker" token to gain double points.

As always, it was a lot of fun, with shouts of joy and despair. Everybody swore they were not at all competitive until it came down to it. In the end there were no losers and only winners.

It was time to join the BBQ buffet and indulge in all the goodies.

After everyone was satisfied, we came to the sad part of the evening: the farewell. We were thanked for the wonderful program and our guidance. We thanked them for being such a terrific group that mingled very easily. It wasn't a goodbye, but definitely an au revoir.
